

(FK 1.9): Princess Sally and the Missing Crown

Once upon a time, in a lovely kingdom, there was a kind princess named Sally. Princess Sally had bright blue eyes and curly hair. She wore beautiful dresses and a shiny crown. Everyone in the kingdom loved her.

One sunny morning, Princess Sally woke up and got ready for the day. She put on her favorite pink dress and her sparkly crown. Today was the Royal Picnic! Everyone was excited.

Sally went to the garden. Flowers bloomed everywhere. The birds sang sweet songs. But when Sally looked in the mirror, she noticed something was wrong. “Oh no! My crown is missing!” she cried.

Sally searched high and low. She looked under her bed and behind the curtains. She even checked in the kitchen. But the crown was nowhere to be found.

“I must find my crown!” Sally said. She decided to ask her friends for help. She ran to the castle courtyard.

“Can you help me find my crown?” she asked her friends. “It is very special to me!”

Her friends, Mia and Tom, nodded. “Yes! We will help you!” they said.

They looked in the garden first. “Is it behind the flowers?” Mia asked. They looked, but the crown was not there.

Next, they checked the playground. “Maybe it fell off while I was playing,” Sally said. They looked under the swings and on the slide, but they still could not find it.

Just then, Tom had an idea. “Let’s ask the animals! They might have seen your crown!”

So, they went to the big oak tree. There, they found a wise old owl. “Mr. Owl, have you seen my crown?” Sally asked.

The owl thought for a moment. “I saw something shiny near the pond,” he said.

“Let’s go to the pond!” Sally shouted. They ran as fast as they could to the pond. When they got there, they looked around.

Suddenly, Sally saw something sparkling in the water. “There it is!” she exclaimed. “My crown!”

Sally carefully reached into the water and picked up her crown. It was a little wet, but it was okay. “Thank you, Mr. Owl!” she called.

Sally put her crown back on her head. She felt so happy! “Now we can have the Royal Picnic!” she said with a smile.

Sally and her friends went back to the garden. They enjoyed sandwiches, fruit, and cookies. Everyone laughed and had a great time.

Princess Sally learned that asking for help is a good idea. With her friends by her side, she could find anything!

The End.

(FK 2.6): The Brave Savitri

Once upon a time, in a nice kingdom, there was a kind princess named Savitri. She had long hair and a big smile. Everyone loved her. But Savitri was sad because she was not married.

One day, Savitri went for a walk in the forest. She saw a prince named Satyavan. He was picking flowers. Savitri felt happy. She wanted to be his friend!

“Hello!” Savitri said. “My name is Savitri. What is your name?”

“I am Satyavan,” the prince replied. “It is nice to meet you!”

They talked and laughed. Savitri learned that Satyavan was brave and kind. She liked him a lot. They became good friends.

One day, a wise man told Savitri, “Satyavan is in danger. He will not live long.” This made Savitri very sad. She loved Satyavan and did not want to lose him.

Savitri wanted to save him. She went to her father, the king. “I want to marry Satyavan!” she said.

The king was surprised. He saw how much Savitri loved him. He agreed. Savitri and Satyavan got married. They were very happy.

But Savitri was still worried about Satyavan. One day, while they were resting under a tree, a dark shadow came. It was Yama, the god of death!

Yama said, “Satyavan must come with me. His time is up.”

Savitri was scared, but she was brave. “Please, Yama! Let him stay. He is a good man, and we are happy!”

Yama shook his head. “I cannot change this.”

Savitri thought fast. “If Satyavan must go, I will go with him!” she said.

Yama was surprised. “You cannot go with him. You are a princess.”

“I do not care! I love Satyavan!” Savitri said.

Yama saw her strong heart. He smiled and said, “If you can answer my questions, I will let him stay.”

Savitri agreed. Yama asked her many questions. She answered them all.

Finally, Yama said, “You are very brave, Savitri. I will let Satyavan live because of your love.”

Savitri was very happy! She ran to Satyavan and hugged him. “You are safe!” she cried.

From that day on, Savitri and Satyavan lived happily in their kingdom. They loved each other very much.

And so, the brave princess Savitri showed that love can win.
